Course Description: (Outcomes): Philosophical analysis of various concepts of the problem of God, including some related concepts to the problem of God. Various leading theories about the problem of God are enumerated and explored philosophically, including theism, atheism, and agnosticism. Students are to learn by way of their reading comprehension of the contents of the assigned readings the contents of these and other related concepts. Classroom lectures and discussions will track the content of the assigned readings that the students are expected to understand. Students are expected to become conversant with various ideas, arguments and analyses concerning the philosophy of religion at a graduate-level of understanding as this is a 500-level course.

Course Requirements: (Outcomes assessment): Undergraduate students are required to take two in-class true-false, multiple choice-type, closed-book and closed-note 90 minute examinations. These examinations will test the student's ability to understand the contents of the assigned readings and lectures that cover the contents of the above stated course outcomes. Each of these examinations is worth up to 50 points. Scores for each of the examinations are to be added and the course grade is to be determined according to the following scale:

90-92=A-
88-89=B+
83-87=B
80-82=B-
78-79=C+
73-77=C
70-72=C-
68-69=D+
63-67=D
60-62=D-
0-59=F

Graduate students are required to take the same two examinations as the undergraduates take, but the grades on those examinations will be averaged together with the grade on the term paper. They are required to obtain pre-approval of their term paper proposal no later than the 12th class meeting of the term. Failure to obtain approval by the Professor for the term paper by the 12th class session will result in a loss of one full grade on the term paper (ex.: from a "B" to a "C") after the term paper has been graded for form and content. The term paper will be at least 25 pages in length, including footnotes. For details on term paper requirements, consult the "Requirements for Philosophy Term Papers."

Additionally, each student is required (in order to pass the course) to pass 5 20-minute essay-type, in-class, closed-book, and closed-note quizzes given throughout the course at the beginning of various class sessions. Since one aim of these quizzes is to see how well students are keeping up with the assigned readings, there will be no make-up quizzes allowed. They are graded "pass/fail" on how well the student recounts in writing the content of assigned readings with special attention placed on the student's ability to accurately state by memory arguments and philosophical assessments of those arguments from the assigned readings and are also meant to test and measure the student's writing skills. In order to pass a quiz, it should consist in at least 5 pages, double-spaced on 8.5" X 11" sheets of paper and should contain no greater than 5 errors of spelling and grammar combined on each quiz. The total length of the passed quizzes taken equals approximately 10-15 pages of typed writing of term papers.

Respecting the Institution of Higher Education and Guarding Against Student Academic Cheating: As noted, all assignments for this course are of the in-class variety except for graduate student term papers. The reason for this is because of the increasing and already rampant rates of student academic cheating, especially on non-in-class assignments wherein several students procure professionals or friends to complete assignments for them, etc. Proctored in-class assignments tremendously reduce the opportunities for student cheating, thereby respecting the grading process and the academic institution as a whole.

Important Notes:

Each student is responsible for understanding everything said in class by the Professor and by students engaged in discussion with the professor even if the student is absent from class.

It is recommended that students take notes well and continuously during each class period.

The examinations are designed to test and measure the student's knowledge of the contents of the textbook readings and classroom discussions.

Students caught cheating on examinations or term papers shall be awarded a grade of "F" for the course and shall be prosecuted to the fullest extent of SDSU regulations!

Due to the rudeness, moral inconsideration, and disturbance that is exhibited when students' cell phones or other electronic devices emit sound in the classroom, students whose electronic devices emit sound shall be awarded a grade of "F" for the course regardless of students' scores on examinations, and regardless of the reason for the device emitting the sound.

Class session attendance is crucial for learning the course material well. Students absent from or arriving late to more than two class sessions, regardless of reason, are subject to be dropped from the course with a grade of "F" at the professor's discretion. Students who are absent the first day of class without prior approval from the professor shall be dropped from the course.

Examinations may be re-scheduled only if the student obtains approval from the professor prior to the examination to be re-scheduled. Otherwise, no re-scheduled examinations are permitted. Since the taking of both examinations is required for a passing grade in the course, a student's missing an examination and not having such approval will cause the student to fail the course. For those obtaining such pre-approval, a re-scheduled examination might not have the same content as the one given to the rest of the class on the original date of examination.

Students with special documented medical needs should avail themselves of Disabled Student Services, SS 1661, and should immediately discuss such needs with the Professor so that such needs might be accommodated for testing purposes.

Expectations of Students: Pursuant to standards at academically respectable universities throughout the United States, students are expected to study the assigned readings and notes for this course at least 6 hours per week (two hours for each hour of registered coursework for this course) and to participate philosophically in classroom discussions.

Required Course Readings:

1. John Hick, Philosophy of Religion, 4th Ed. (Prentice-Hall, 1990).
2. J. L. Mackie, The Miracle of Theism (Oxford University Press, 1982).
3. J. Angelo Corlett, The Errors of Atheism (Continuum Books, 2010).

These course readings represent the reasoned perspectives of a leading theist, the leading atheist, and a leading agnostic (respectively) in the field of philosophy of religion. They also consist in a range of levels of philosophical discourse, including an introductory level book as well as an advanced level book. They also represent both traditional topics and discourse in philosophy of religion as well as some perspectives never before advanced in philosophy of religion. Each book is endorsed by distinguished scholars in the field.

NOTE: Students are advised that it is illegal to violate federal copyright laws which prohibit the illegal downloading or otherwise accessing of all copyrighted materials. Publishers are aggressive and increasingly successful in filing and winning lawsuits against students and others who violate such laws.
