

FEMINIST PHILOSOPHY FORUM

Fall 2024

WHAT IS THIS ABOUT?

The general goal of this forum is to create opportunities for students to engage with feminist topics, practice close reading in low-stakes settings, and build community – simply put, we aim to construct an imaginative and collaborative space to engage with feminist philosophy!

QUESTIONS AND POSSIBILITIES

Q: What will we be reading?

A: There is always a tentative list of feminist articles and books to choose from; however, this list can (and should) be amended, and our engagement with a text is contingent on the desires of the group. Come with ideas!

Q: Will we do anything beyond reading and discussing?

A: In prior forms, this space has been used to create a symposium of professors or guest speakers, travel to local conferences or talks, and hold workshops. Such things could become available if there is enough interest!

"[Feminism] asks: what would it be to end the political, social, sexual, economic, psychological, and physical subordination of women? It answers: we do not know; let us try and see." – Amia Srinivasan
